

A Valuable Resource for Research and Teaching at the Medical University of Vienna

The Medical University of Vienna is committed to providing researchers and professors with high-quality resources to enhance their research and teaching. As part of this initiative, the JoVE (Journal of Visualized Experiments) platform is available for you to integrate into your academic work.

How to use JoVE?

You can access JoVE through the website: <https://app.jove.com>. Once logged in, you will have full access to a wide range of videos and features, including:

-  Search Functionality: Easily search for videos by topic, field, or keyword.
-  Playlists: Curate a list of relevant videos for your courses, lectures, or research.
-  Educational Videos for Teaching: Select videos that align with your course curriculum to supplement your teaching materials.
-  Automated Quizzes: You can create quizzes based on JoVE videos, which can be automatically generated and shared with your students.
-  Integration with Moodle: Embed JoVE videos and quizzes directly into your Moodle courses.
-  Research: Search for suitable methods for your research and simply recreate them with the help of the video, a detailed description and an attached list of materials.

What is JoVE?

JoVE is a peer-reviewed scientific video journal that publishes high-quality video demonstrations of experiments in various fields, including medical research, biology, chemistry, clinical studies, and more.

The platform provides step-by-step visual instructions for complex scientific experiments, making it easier to understand and replicate research protocols.

In addition to research-focused content, JoVE also offers educational videos specifically designed to help professors teach their students.
